Ohio River Rises, Menacing Several Cities

MARTINS FERRY FEARS STREAM TO FLOOD CITY

Rain Slackens In Region Of Pittsburgh, Ending Immediate Danger

BIG PROJECT HALTED

Golden Triangle Escapes Without Damage

MARTINS FERRY, Oct. 29 — (UP)—The river stage here today was 34 feet, two feet under flood stage which was expected to be reached by noon tomorrow if the river continues to rise at its present rate.

Lockmaster J. R. Hill said the river was rising at the rate of nine-tenths foot an hour.

STUEBENVILLE, Oct. 29 — (UP)—Officials at Lock 10 here today said the Ohio river was expected to reach a stage of 27 to 28 feet early tomorrow, eight feet below flood stage.

EAST LIVERPOOL, Oct. 29 — (UP)—Threatening an unprecedented flood, the Ohio river, rising eight-tenths of a foot an hour, attained the 23.8 foot mark here today.

The rise, due to heavy rains along the Monongahela river at Pittsburgh, forced suspension of work on a $232,000 W. P. A. sanitary sewer here on which 125 relief clients are employed.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 29—(UP)—Slackening of rain along watersheds of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers today ended threat of a serious flood at Pittsburgh and a 28-foot crest was expected to sweep by the city at noon.

United States Weather Bureau Observer W. S. Brotzman held to predictions of a 28-foot stage at "the point," confluence of the Monongahela and Allegheny, which was three feet above flood stage and enough to send water into sections of the city's low-lying northside and a few downtown basements.

At 8 a. m. the gauge reading at "the point" was 26.6, a rise of about .4 of a foot in an hour.

Pittsburgh's Golden Triangle, business area inundated in 1936 with $30,000,000 damages, and again in the Spring of this year, would be affected only by a 30-foot flood.

Ridgely in Danger

The most seriously hit city in the tri-state's "little flood" was Ridgely, W. Va., across the Potomac from Cumberland, Md., where 400 persons were forced to flee to higher ground and move their furniture to safety.

New Dealers Support Both Sides

A PECULIAR situation has developed in the Cleveland majority race. New Dealers are supporting both sides. Joseph B. Keenan, left, Democrat and assistant U. S. attorney general, is supporting Mayor Harold H. Burton, Republican, for re-election. Charles West, who ran for the Democratic nomination for governor in Ohio and who now is undersecretary of the interior and liaison man for President Roosevelt, is supporting John O. McWilliams, Democratic candidate for mayor. Burton has had a reform administration. Keenan, who is from Cleveland, was an "original Roosevelt man." The Roosevelt administration lets it be known, however, that it is maintaining a hands-off policy in spite of conflicting activities of Keenan and West.

He predicted passage of a bill embodying the plan within "three or four weeks" after congress meets in special session Nov. 15.

Sen. McGill and Sen. James Pope, Ida., authors of the ever-normal granary plan bill, and members of the sub-committee appointed

STATE ENDS CASE AGAINST FRYE IN TRAFFIC TRAGEDY

George E. Gerhardt, prosecutor, rested the state's case shortly before noon Friday in the second degree manslaughter trial of Robert Frye, 28, of Mansfield.

Attorneys said there was a possibility the case may be submitted to the jury Friday. Joseph Adkins, Jr., attorney for Frye, said he expected to call six or seven persons to the stand, most of them character witnesses. The state called 11 witnesses.

Due to a hearing on motions for a new trial in a damage action assigned for Saturday at 9 a. m., the Frye trial may be carried over until Monday if it is not completed Friday.

Frye's case resulted from an auto-pedestrian accident last June 27 on Route 23 just south of Circleville which resulted in the death of Miss Elsie Harvey, of Wharton, W. Va., believed hitch-hiking to her home.

Hearing on new trial motions in the suit of Mrs. Asa Elisea against the Benedict Transportation Lines, Columbus, is scheduled in court at 9 a. m. Saturday.

The company seeks a new trial. Mrs. Elisea, widow of Asa Elisea, was awarded $5,666.66 by a Common Pleas court jury on Sept. 18. Mr. Elisea, Bernard Dowden and John McCrady were killed in an auto-truck collision on Route 23 north of Circleville, in March of 1936.

*Mrs. Elisea sued for $22,786.

SPECIAL DEPUTY DIES; BELIEVED HIT-SKIP VICTIM

He died later in a hospital of a skull fracture, broken arm and leg and internal injuries. His home was in Waterville.

DEFENSE READY TO BEGIN FIGHT FOR MRS. HAHN

State Completes Charges Friday; Ninety-Five Persons Testify

POISONING IS CHARGED

Vital Organs Of Aged Men To Be Analyzed

CINCINNATI, Oct. 29—(UP)—The state today rested its first degree murder case against Anna Marie Hahn, 31, accused of poisoning four elderly men to get their savings.

The state, which has been presenting testimony for more than two weeks in the "mass murder" trial which began Oct. 11, completed its case shortly after 10 a. m. Its 95th witness was heard by the jury of 11 women and one man.

The indictment on which Mrs. Hahn is being tried was based on the death of Jacob Wagner, a 78-year-old German gardener. The deaths of three others were cited by the prosecution as collateral evidence.

Lawyers Addressed

Judge Charles S. Bell immediately sent the jury out of the courtroom and addressed the lawyers. He said he was making available to the defense portions of the vital organs of George Gsellman, 67; Albert Palmer, 72; George Obendorfer, 67, and Wagner.

Judge Bell explained that the defense had asked the court to appoint an expert for an analysis of the organs of Wagner and Gsellman. He said he was offering the defense the opportunity of having its own experts examine the vital organs of all four men.

He also offered the defense photographic copies of all documents offered in evidence for examination by experts. Defense Counsel Joseph Hoodin said whether the defense would have experts analyze the evidence depended on how long the judge would allow for such analysis.

Judge Bell adjourned court briefly.

Preponderance of Strength Now With C. I. O.

IN THE "peace" conferences between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L., John L. Lewis' C. I. O. has the preponderance of membership—all gained within slightly more than a year. C. I. O. membership is estimated at 3,718,000; American Federation of Labor, 3,200,000. The suggestion of the

C. I. O. delegation, that the C. I. O. go into the

A. F. of L. as a new department, authorized to organize workers in mass production, would give the C. I. O. control by sheer weight of numbers. Thus it is fought by William Green's A. F. of L. conferees at the "peace" meetings.

TWO INJURED IN TRAFFIC WRECKS

Columbus Woman's Head Cut; Trucker Hurt As Vehicle Overturns

Two persons were treated in Berger hospital Thursday for injuries received in traffic accidents.

Mrs. Lewis Tenaglia, 102 Dakota avenue, Columbus, was treated by Dr. E. S. Shane for a severe scalp laceration extending around her forehead, suffered in an auto accident on Route 23 in Ross county. Mrs. Tenaglia was admitted to the hospital. She was to be discharged Friday.

Pickaway county officers were told Mrs. Tenaglia's injury was caused by glass in a tray she was holding when the accident occurred. They said the auto in which she was riding struck the rear of another car, then went into a ditch.

Henry Hess, 67, of Delaware Route 3, received a scalp laceration and cut finger when his truck overturned on Route 104 at the intersection of Route 22, west of Circleville.

Hess was driving north on Route 104 with a load of coal. The truck overturned when he applied his brakes. Hess was taken to the hospital for treatment by R. E. Armstrong, deputy sheriff. He was discharged after treatment.

MARKET TRADING QUIET; LONDON'S FIGURES CLIMB

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—(UP)—Trading quieted on the stock exchange at a firm opening today. Bonds held steady, while cotton futures opened down a few points.

Before the New York opening the London market dipped and rallied, with most American stocks rising above previous New York closings.

Initial gains in the share market ranged to more than a point and were distributed over a broad list.

Overnight the stock exchange announced results of its investigation of trading in five leading issues in the period between Sept. 7 and 25, inclusive, deduced the statistics as inconclusive and invited the Twentieth Century fund to make a comprehensive study of the effect of short selling on security markets. The exchange meanwhile adjusted its margins on carrying accounts to conform with the latest reserve board margins.

Among leading issues at the outset, Bethlehem was at 53½ up 2½; American can 95½ up 1½; Westinghouse Electric 104 up 1; U. S. Steel 62½ up ½; Deere 79½ up 1; Youngstown Sheet & Tube 44½ up 1½; Chrysler 74½ up ½; Kennecott 36½ up ½ and Du Pont 124½ up 2½. Gains were extended in early trading with volume increasing.

FORMER WIFE OF GUGGENHEIM AND ESCORT ROBBED

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—(UP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Eaton Guggenheim, 32, recently divorced wife of Col. Meyer Robert Guggenheim, an heir to the Guggenheim mining fortune, and her farm hand escort were attacked and robbed by two men early today as they left an eating place in Queens, not far from the scene of the "Red Circle" murders.

Mrs. Guggenheim and John Fry, Jr., 25-year-old employe on Guggenheim's farm at Babylon, Long Island, walked into a diner at Mineola and reported they were attacked by two heavy-set men as they left Felecci's Commercial club on Springfield boulevard and robbed of $461.

Their clothes were torn and both were bleeding from wounds. They said they had started to enter their automobile, parked two blocks from the restaurant, when the men appeared.

The men dragged Fry away from the car, he said, hit him on the head, kicked him and took his wallet containing $161. The bandits then struck Mrs. Guggenheim on the chin, knocking her down, and took $300 from her. The men fled into the darkness and escaped, leaving their victims on the ground.

CHARGE AGAINST POS RULED OUT

Judge Adkins Decides In Favor Of Demurrer To Indictment

Indictment charging practicing medicine without a license against J. J. Pos, Circleville, was termed "fatally defective" in an entry on a demurrer filed in Common Pleas court Friday.

The entry, signed by Judge J. W. Adkins, says the indictment is "fatally defective" and cannot be amended, that it fails to state an offense according to the laws of Ohio, and that it fails to state the specific purpose for which the alleged treatment was given, and in this manner fails to differentiate the act alleged from any other offense.

An indictment against Mr. Pos was returned secretly Sept. 8 at the last session of the grand jury. It contended that on or about May 1 he practiced medicine in that he prescribed a certain treatment to Mrs. Walden Reichelderfer for a $2 fee.

Judge Adkins held that the indictment does not state the purpose of the treatment.

Kunselman resigned recently as a Republican committeeman and is seeking the office as an independent candidate. His platform is municipal ownership plus a promise to appoint an advisory committee of business and professional men on his election.

JAPAN DECLINES PEACE SESSION WITH THIRD PARTY

TOKYO, Oct. 29—(UP)—Japan reiterated through a foreign office spokesman today that she will not accept third party mediation of the Chinese-Japanese war.

He said that Japan was willing, however, to consider any proposals made directly by China. The proposals have not been received. The spokesman declined to say whether that conversations would be open or secret in event discussions can be arranged. He added that Japan might make some statement of attitude in event Chinese proposals are received.

TROOPS, OTHERS INJURED DURING HEAVY BOMBING

Emergency Call Hurries Ambulances Into West Part of Settlement

ORIGIN NOT CERTAIN

Defenders Firing Along Area, But Not Into It

SHANGHAI, Oct. 29. — (UP) — Shells rained to-night into the British line west of the international settlement and into the French concession, causing casualties among foreigners and British troops.

Three riflemen were killed and two wounded. An emergency call from the British Ulster rifles in the western section said:

"Several killed; too many wounded to count. One foreigner killed."

Ambulances sped to the scene from the international settlement.

Foreigners were in the greatest danger. American, British and French authorities were deeply concerned and plainly showed their resentment.

Origin Uncertain

The origin of the shells was not immediately apparent, although it was known that the Chinese, whose advance lines are west of the French concession and international settlement, were shooting parallel to international territory and not into it. One shell fell in Jessfield road, along Soochow creek, causing the casualties among the Ulster riflemen, in addition to killing three Chinese and wounding eight.

Japs to Spare 150 of Defenders

SHANGHAI, Oct. 29—(UP)—Japanese army authorities, their warrior blood warmed by admiration of a heroic foe, announced today that they would stop their attack entirely on the 150 men of a Chinese doomed battalion fortified on the bank of the Soochow creek.

A Japanese army spokesman said that orders would be issued to commanding officers on the spot to halt their attack. Officially, the Japanese explained that the Chinese were so strongly fortified and so tenacious, that to attack them would endanger the defense lines of the United States marines and British Royal Welch Fusiliers across the creek from the two warehouses in which the Chinese had held out for two days, sworn to die rather than surrender.

But privately the Japanese were frank in their admiration of the Chinese soldiers' courage—a courage which fired the pride of all China. They had attacked the defenders time after time, sending small detachments creeping up, to be beaten back by hand grenades and machine gun bullets. The only thing left was a big scale attack, in which the Chinese would be blasted out by field artillery, and the Japanese decided not to make it.

British Block Creek

Before the attack ended, the British Royal Welch Fusiliers had blockaded Soochow creek against two Japanese navy motorboats that sought to attack the fortress-warehouses from the water, coincident with a land attack.

Thoroughly angered, the British ordered the Japanese back into the Whangpoo river—and this anger was increased tonight when a Royal Ulster rifleman was killed by a stray bullet in the British defense line.

HANNAN GARAGE IS DAMAGED BY $15,000 BLAZE

Building Destroyed As Gasoline Becomes Ignited

NEW AUTOS BURNED

Godman Factory, Brewery Company Menaced

LANCASTER, Oct. 29 — Damage estimated between $15,000 and $20,000 resulted from a fire Thursday that destroyed the Kelly Hannan garage and for a time threatened to sweep through a Godman shoe factory and the Lancaster Brewery Co., adjacent to the garage.

Fire Chief Charles Craft said investigation revealed that the fire started when gasoline, in which auto motor parts were being cleaned, ignited. All available fire equipment in the city was rushed to the blaze. More than a score of volunteer firemen assisted in fighting the fire.

A sprinkler system in the shoe factory was credited with checking the blaze in the plant. Hannan said three new cars, one used car and a mechanic's car were burned. There were no explosions from gasoline, but high tension lines over the building were broken.

An open side garage owned by the Lancaster Brewery Co., used for truck storage in the Summer, was destroyed. The loss of the Godman company will run into several thousand dollars. There was little direct damage to the building by flames but water ruined considerable stock. Machinery will have to be repaired and cleaned before placed in operation. Hannan operated a garage in Circleville before moving to Lancaster.

Laurelville Miss C. Allen and Robert Davis of Columbus were week-end guests of Mrs. Lessel Allen.

DIET AND HEALTH

If Your Teeth Ache, It May Be Neuralgia

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I AM ASKED to discuss the question of neuralgia of the teeth. This has a familiar sound, and nearly every patient who has neuralgia of the facial nerve sooner or later thinks it is due to the teeth. Many teeth have been sacrificed for that reason.

When a large number of teeth begin to ache at the same time, it probably is due to neuralgia of the fifth nerve, which is the nerve that supplies sensation to the structures of the head and face. This so-called trigeminal neuralgia or tic douloureux occurs usually in people past middle life. In fact, it is really a disease of early old age.

The nerve is called the trigeminal nerve because it has three branches, one of which goes above the eyes, one to the upper jaw, and one to the lower jaw. Neuralgia may occur in all of these branches or in any one separately.

The one which goes to the skin above the eyes will produce a severe headache, localized in the forehead, and this is frequently ascribed to eye trouble or eye strain, although, as a matter of fact, the eyes have nothing to do with it any more than the teeth have with neuralgia of the other two branches. It is easy to see that a nerve which supplies all the teeth might become irritable and the neuralgia would be assigned to the teeth themselves. It is unfortunate that frequently a number of teeth are sacrificed before the real cause of the disturbance is found.

Pain Is Gone

To complicate that situation, it occasionally happens that a patient will report that the removal of the teeth cured the pain for six months. This is simply an example of spontaneous remission which frequently occurs in the disease. The curious fact is that when patients go to the doctor's office, it is the same as people who go to a dentist's office with aching teeth—as soon as they get into the office the pain is gone.

At first, this neuralgia comes in attacks, but as time goes on, it is likely to become continuous and very severe. People who have had attacks must be careful not to irritate any of the so-called trigger zones, the touching of which will incite the paroxysm. Simply touching the upper lip or the point of the nose may induce an attack; also cleaning the teeth may do so. In treatment a number of remedies have been tried. Perhaps the most successful is the inhalation of a volatile preparation called "trichlorethylene." This gives relief in 10 to 20 per cent of cases, but the relief is seldom permanent. There are hardly any other medicines that do any good. According to those who have had the most experience, the only real treatment is injection of the nerve with alcohol or surgical resection of the sensory route of the nerve within the cranial cavity.

MOST OF G.O.P. LEADERS FAVOR HOOVER'S PLAN

90 Percent of Committee Expected To Vote For Mid-Term Parley

EDGE IDEA SCORED

National Organization To Meet Nov. 5-6

CHICAGO, Oct. 29 — (UP) — A majority of the Republican national committee members who will meet here Nov. 5 and 6 favor former President Herbert Hoover's proposal for an interim national convention, a United Press nationwide survey showed today.

Fifty-one members from 38 states and the District of Columbia replied this way to the United Press inquiry:

In favor of the "Hoover plan" — 32.

Opposed to the "Hoover plan" — 1.

Non-committal — 18.

Some leaders estimated 90 percent of the committee would vote in favor of the convention next year.

Two Questions Asked

Committeemen and women were polled on two questions:

1. Do you favor Hoover's proposal for a national convention of the Republican party in 1938?

2. Do you favor the proposal of former Sen. Walter E. Edge of Connecticut for a "free-for-all" anti-New Deal convention, including not only the Republican party but "labor, agriculture, industry, the American Legion and practically all permanent phases of American life, young and old."

Few committee members favored the Edge proposal, although W. S. Hallahan, West Virginia, said he could "see substantial merit in Senator Edge's proposal and am in favor of blending" it with the Hoover plan.

R. B. Creager of Texas thought the Edge plan "impractical." "Neither the American Federation of Labor nor the Committee for Industrial Organization would officially participate," Creager said. "agriculture is not organized and has no universally recognized

Ashville Parent-Teacher Group Hears Dr. M'Nutt

By S. D. FRIDLEY

The October meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association was opened Thursday evening by the Rev. H. D. Fudge. The fifth grade won the attendance banner.

The program committee has planned for the year a most interesting program and urges everyone to actively take part. For this evening the Fudge sisters sang a duet and a solo was sung by Clayton Baum.

Mr. Martin introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. McNutt of the state department of education at Columbus. Speaking on the subject of "The Cooperation of the Home with the School," he stressed that children respond to the situation and circumstances as they find them. A child must be taught the fundamentals of living. Practice through doing to form habits will develop traits which are desirable for later life. He must have rights and be allowed to defend them.

Mrs. Higley and her daughter Jane, played a piano duet. The meeting was then adjourned and refreshments of doughnuts and cider were served to the 150 or more present by the social committee.

leadership. The same is true of industry. The American Legion consists of Republicans, Democrats, and others, so there is no possibility of it as an organization uniting on any program."

Sen. Daniel L. Hastings, Delaware national committeeman, said he favored both the Edge and Hoover proposals with a strictly Republican conference first which would include the best method of holding a later meeting to include others besides Republicans.

OPEN LETTERS
TO SHOW DIRECTORS

GENTLEMEN: Circleville's Pumpkin Show society faces a loss on this year's celebration, due to bad weather. Weather conditions caused a deep cut in revenues of the 1936 show, too. A movement is under way to set the dates of the celebration earlier in October. This suggestion deserves the serious consideration of show directors. I realize that it is impossible to control the weather, but a trip around the show exhibits this year produced convincing evidence that an earlier date would be much better. Flowers and vegetables were destroyed by the heavy frosts. The pumpkin exhibit was far below normal. Farmers who had pumpkins had sold a large part of them to the canning factories. For the betterment of the show and to cut expenses it would be possible to eliminate two parades in the 1938 event. The comic parade had few entries, and it seems that in recent years few persons have taken any interest in this pageant. The old vehicle and prize winners parade on Saturday night could be eliminated. When weather conditions are favorable the crowd in Circleville on the Saturday night of the festival is too large for a parade. This year the parade was broken at several places due to the crowd. Directors should seek the aid of some civic organizations in sponsoring parades. I believe there are organizations which would welcome an opportunity to sponsor a parade in the show and furnish prizes. Those in charge of shows and rides believe fewer and better parades would mean more revenue to the society. They contend that drawn-out parades cause reductions in their business and less revenue for the society, which receives a percentage of receipts. I heard numerous visitors remark about the number of ball games this year. The society should limit these concessions.

CIRCUITEER
TO BICYCLISTS
BOYS, GIRLS: The bicycle revival has been so widespread that it has created new and serious traffic problems and perils. In one small city the police department has taken the situation in hand and is conducting weekly demonstrations to show boys and girls in the eight public schools how to ride their bikes without menacing their own or other persons' safety. It announces further that it means business and will prosecute all pupils who violate traffic laws and take away their riding privileges. Among the instructions issued are such commonsense rules as these: Don't ride unless your bicycle has

World At A Glance

James Roosevelt's selection for the post of liaison man between his father and the heads of the government's numerous independent administrations, boards, commissions and bureaus naturally causes a certain amount of comment as to a "Roosevelt dynasty." Yet there is less malice in this kind of talk than one might perhaps have expected. For one thing, "young James" is extremely popular with Washington newspapermen. He is an affable, accommodating chap and he "delivers the goods." When a correspondent asks him for information, if it reasonably is available the inquiring scribe gets it. He is not a bit up-stage and is extremely accessible. In short, he is a great news convenience, and the reporters appreciate him. They have no disposition to encourage disagreeable remarks concerning his new assignment; he has done too many favors for too many of them.
A NECESSARY JOB
Another thing, everyone knows that "young James' job is one which was much needed. There are so many federal agencies now that their respective a good horn, lights and brakes. Go single file. Always keep to the right of the road, close to the curb. Do not carry any passengers. Do not hold to a moving vehicle. Do not carry packages in one hand and guide with the other. If you want to do tricks, use a field. Obey traffic laws. The youngsters also are taught signals to be used in traffic, to signify their intention to turn left or right or to stop. It is a sensible program.

CIRCUITEER

TO COUNCILMEN
MEMBERS: Your reconsideration of wig-wag signals on the Norfolk & Western railroad crossings in Circleville was a wise move in the opinion of many motorists. They believe a swinging red light is a better, more modern warning than the gates. Since the railroad company has agreed to provide these new signals, retain watchmen on the payroll by keeping the gate at W. Main street in operation, and the entire program has been approved by the utilities commission, council would have been foolish to have turned down the offer.
CIRCUITEER

TO EDWARD C. RECTOR
DEAR SIR: Congratulations on your election to presidency of the Pickaway County Methodist Brotherhood. The Mt. Pleasant brotherhood, under your leadership, has been a live-wire organization. I hope you are successful in introducing that same spirit into the county organization. A county brotherhood can play an important part in various community activities. I wish your organization outstanding success.
CIRCUITEER

TO RESIDENTS
ROUNDTOWNERS: Circleville needs a reforestation program. Street improvements, including installation of sidewalks and gutters, has caused the removal of many fine trees. Those that have been removed should be replaced immediately with young trees. There are many dead trees along Circleville streets that should be replaced. This city is proud of its fine shade trees and an effort should be made to keep a tree replacement program in operation. This program should be boosted by some civic organization.
CIRCUITEER

TO VOTERS
FRIENDS: Next Tuesday is election day. It is the duty of each as a citizen to go to the polls and cast a vote. Vote for those persons you know will serve the best interests of your city, village or township. Persons who fail to vote usually are the first to complain about the candidate the other fellow helped elect.
CIRCUITEER

TO CEMETERY OFFICIALS
FOLK: I suggest you install some benches for the convenience of persons who do not visit the grounds in automobiles. Visitors dislike sitting on the ground or on tombstones. Many elderly persons walk through the cemetery, and they have no place to rest when they become tired. The benches would be inexpensive and they would certainly be a convenience. Circleville's cemetery is a beautiful park, the only park the city possesses.

heads' request for engagements at the White House, to discuss their various problems unavoidably pile up hopelessly. Suppose the president works in 12-hour shifts. And suppose he limits each engagement to 15 minutes. He still has seen only 48 visitors daily. And applicants for hearings number into the hundreds.
To be sure, he has Secretaries McIntyre and Early to act as buffers for him, but there are not enough of them.
So he picks "young James" to supplement them.
CLOSE RELATION AIDS
It raises the cry of nepotism. It is a cry which has been raised against many senators and representatives—as selecting wives, sons, daughters, brothers, sisters and relatives-in-law as secretaries and clerks, or as choosing home town folk for these positions.
I never have sympathized with this outcry.
When, as a newspaperman, I ask for an interview with a senator or representative, I like to meet, in his outer office, a secretary or clerk who knows the point-of-view of his boss.
There is a class of legislative

COPYRIGHT BY BRUCE HAMILTON, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER 40
ONE AFTERNOON about three weeks before Christmas, Tim was visited at his surgery by Bennett, the landlord of the Goose Quill. Bennett was a former Sussex cricket pro, a very decent sort of man who had been an irregular patient for years. He held a high opinion of Tim's professional skill, and was also linked with him by the fact that his daughter had spent three very happy years as a parlormaid at The Wilderness before leaving to get married.
Today, he was unable to point to anything particularly wrong with his teeth. "Just thought it was time you gave me a once-over, Mr. Kennedy," he said; but after Tim had poked about for a while and declared there was nothing requiring attention, he showed a disposition to linger.
"Your man Adams not about today?" he asked at last, with an assumed casualness.
"No, he's got one of his nervous headaches," replied Tim. "I told him to rest."
Adams had actually laid claim to a headache, and expressed his intention of going back to bed for a few hours. "I may be down later," he had said. "Meantime, you can carry on for yourself all right for a bit." Today Tim had been obliged to let in his own patients, leaving his work to do it. Adams had not turned up.
"Well, I hope you don't blame me for his headaches, sir," said Bennett.
"I certainly don't, Mr. Bennett. Why should I?"
"You might argue that he picks 'em up at my place."
Tim picked up one of his instruments and began to clean it.
"I know he goes there at nights, of course," he said after a pause.
"He's putting away a lot, eh?"
"He certainly is, Mr. Kennedy."
"Of course you understand, sir. We can't refuse to serve anyone with liquor within licensed hours so long as they don't actually make a disturbance. But you've always treated me very well, Mr. Kennedy, and I thought I ought to give you a word of warning."
"Has Adams been making a nuisance of himself, then?"
"Not exactly. It'd be easier to deal with if he had. But he's been talking wild."
Tim turned to face the man. "You'd better tell me what you're getting at, Bennett. It's no use making half-confidences. . . . Strictly between ourselves, of course."
"It's a bit difficult for me to tell you, sir. . . . Truth is, when he's got a awful headache, he begins to talk wild, as I say. . . . Disrespectful about you, sir, I mean."
"What has he been saying about me exactly?"
"Well, sir, he's called you an old humbug, and names like that."
"Anything else?"
"He's kind of hinted that he knows a thing or two about you. . . . Understand, sir, nobody takes him seriously when he starts talking like that. But, of course, it looks bad."
"I wish you'd be as precise as you can, Bennett. I want to get this quite clear."
Bennett fidgeted uneasily in the chair. "I don't like bearing tales, sir, and that's flat. But, to give you an example, last night, somebody had been saying you looked a bit . . . off color, sir, and how it must have affected you. . . . All quite nice and sympathetic, sir, nothing to give offense."
"Then Adams said, 'Broken up nothing,' or something like that. 'He wasn't sorry to get rid of his missus, take my word for it he wasn't.'"
"Someone told him to shut up, that was no way to talk. Then Adams got excited. He said, 'I could prove it to you if I wanted to, perhaps some day I will.' He was pretty far gone, you see, Mr. Kennedy. . . . It was just on closing time, anyway, so I put a stop to it, hustled 'em all out a bit quicker than usual. . . . I tell you, I'm not surprised he's got a headache this morning."
Tim went over to the washbasin, and soaped his hands for a few moments in silence. "I'm glad you've come to me, Bennett," he said.
"I'll be very glad to, sir," he said.
After he had gone, Tim wiped the perspiration from his forehead. He had handled that pretty well, but the danger remained imminent. There were no more patients due for half an hour; he had time to think. He sat down before the bureau.
What was to be done? It was clear that the present state of affairs could not long continue without disaster. It could not be permitted to continue. Now Adams had started talking, it was almost certain he would do so again. Allow that this was a drunken indiscretion he was probably repenting in sobriety this morning; the fact remained that a man who has once talked recklessly in drink will do so again.
And the next time he might be more explicit, he might let things out to an extent which could not be ignored, leading to police inquiries, and Adams having to tell the truth in self-defense.
Adams must be disarmed. But how? Tim was no longer in a position to make a bid outright for the letter, a bid likely to be sufficiently attractive to be taken up. He had been spending money freely lately, first over Alma, then over the distraction by which he had sought to forget Alma. His balance at the bank had shrunk to near the $500 mark. Besides, he would have to move shortly, and the move was bound to involve him in considerable expense. Very few checks had come in lately.
There were certainly a few long-standing accounts, but they were mostly with patients whose credit was excellent; to press for immediate payment would be to reveal his own financial stringency, and still further prejudice his reputation in the town. Suppose, though, he were able to repeat his offer of $500. Was there a reasonable chance of Adams accepting? Probably not. He had refused it contemptuously a few weeks before, and he was unlikely to have changed his mind so soon.
What else remained? He would gladly have killed Adams, contrived another accident. But murder here did not meet the case. Its only effect would be to precipitate disaster, if Adams had spoken the truth.
If Adams had spoken the truth. . . . Tim struck his fist violently on the desk. Had Adams been lying to secure himself? He had the letter no doubt, but the story of confiding it to a solicitor, "to be opened after my death," after the manner of detective stories, was on the face of it improbable. Men of Adams' class did not go to solicitors.
Had he got the letter close at hand? Not on his person, that would be altogether too hazardous! Not at the surgery, but at The Wilderness, in his room, either locked in a trunk, or concealed in some well-concealed hiding place?
Tim got up. His mind was working again; the stimulus of immediate fear had revived his faculties. The more he thought of it the more certain he felt he was on the right track. And the thing could be put to the proof; it would not be hard to contrive a search of Adams' room. He could easily make arrangements so as to do so with the minimum risk of interference. The sooner the better, too.
On leaving the surgery, Tim looked in at the Royal cinema, and bought two tickets for the last performance that evening. Possibly they would be wasted; it was more than likely that after his excess of the night before Adams would elect to spend a quiet evening. The tickets were, of course, not for Adams, but for the cook and housemaid, whose bedrooms were close to that of Adams'.

DON'T BLOCKADE HIM

EVERY PLAYER should keep his eyes open to avoid blocking his partner in the run of a suit. Many a no trump defense depends entirely upon the bringing in of a single string of cards. If it is interrupted, through the shorter partner being unable to keep the longer one in the lead, disaster befalls.

win four spade tricks and possibly set the contract.

When the declarer led a diamond to the second trick, East winning with the K, he laid down the spade A, on which West played the spade 3, not the 9, as he should. East then returned the spade 4, but as West had blocked the suit, only three tricks were taken in spades.

The declarer was able to make 2-No Trump on the hand, as, after winning the spades, West was obliged to lead another diamond. South then took the club finesse to West, who won with the K. A club was returned and declarer cashed three clubs, three diamonds, one heart and one spade.

The spade J was led by West, the 5 played from dummy and East, reading his partner for four cards of the suit, decided to allow South to win the first trick with the Q, so that when the diamond was finessed to him, his side could

THREE EVENTS SCHEDULED FOR FRIDAY, 2 TO 11

Inspection Of Addition To Buildings, Greenfield Game Offered

ART IS ON EXHIBIT

Structure To Be Opened After Contest

All patrons of Circleville schools were invited Friday by Frank Fischer, city superintendent, to participate in the "open house" celebration at the high school and the dedication exercises at the high school athletic field this afternoon and tonight.

The invitation was sent to all parents through the pupils in all schools. The celebration was termed a "triple event" by the superintendent.

Following is a copy of the invitation: Friday, October 29, is a red-letter day in our schools. On that day a triple event will occur.

1. An Open House will be held so that the public may see the new addition to the Corwin and High School buildings. Of this beautiful addition the Board of Education, the teachers and pupils are very proud.

2. On the ground floor an art exhibit, covering our first year of work, will be shown.

3. As a part of the Circleville-Greenfield football game, the new lighting system of the football field, sponsored by the Stouge club and a group of 25 business men, will be dedicated. The hours of these events will be from 2 until 11. The building will be closed only during the hours of the game, which begins at 8.

You are cordially invited to spend a part of these hours with us.

Very sincerely yours,
FRANK FISCHER

TROOPS, OTHERS INJURED DURING HEAVY BOMBING

More and more, the danger of this war was being brought into the international area. Three shells, which police believed to be Japanese, struck in the French concessions tonight, and one shell struck a school. There were no casualties.

Infantry squads and volunteer dynamiters had tried to take the fortress of the doomed battalion in force and by stratagem before the "naval" attack. All efforts had failed. A 3-inch field gun had been brought to bear on the warehouses at short range—too short, it proved to be effective.

Then as the final resort the Japanese brought in their little "navy." And the navy met not only a blockade by Chinese watermen, acting on instructions and with the guidance of the British but it met also a stern order by the Welch Fusiliers to go back. What threatened to be an ugly international incident ended—for the moment at least—when the Japanese obeyed a British officer's warning to return down the creek.

There were hundreds of people across the creek on the international settlement side watching the fight for the warehouses when word came that two little Japanese motorboats were coming.

Boats Massed

The Chinese rivermen rushed for their sampans, tied along the creek. For 400 yards they massed their boats in an impassable barrier.

The Japanese boats reached the lower end of the barrier, and stopped. The Chinese watermen ran on down the creek and built another barrier below the motorboats. The little Japanese "navy" was trapped. It looked for a moment as if the Japanese themselves were a doomed detachment.

Then Brigadier A. P. D. Telfer-

FAYETTE COUNTY RE-INDICTS TWO MEN AS KILLERS

WASHINGTON C. H., Oct. 29—Fayette county's grand jury returned two new indictments, each with two counts, Thursday, against Everett Jones and Walter Barnes for the murder of Robert W. Lindsey, Jeffersonville pool room proprietor, last July 4.

Both indictments charge first degree murder, one count being for the deliberate, premeditated and malicious killing of Lindsey; the second for murder committed in attempting to perpetrate a robbery.

The new indictments differ from those returned two weeks ago in that they contain an extra count for murder while attempting to perpetrate a robbery.

Smollett, British troop commander-in-chief, arrived on the double. He told the Japanese that they must get away from there, the British defense sector. The Japanese agreed to do so if they could, and asked the brigadier to have the lower boom removed.

The two little Japanese motorboats, with their machine guns and one 2-inch gun, reached the Whangpoo safely, and Chinese watermen at once began building bigger and better booms to frustrate any further attack in event the Japanese changed their minds.

The British admitted frankly that they showed the watermen how to build the booms, tying the sampans together with wire. The British held that the entire creek here was British defense territory.

Out in the western suburbs of Shanghai hundreds of thousands of men, Chinese and Japanese, were fighting savagely. British troops fired on Japanese airplanes, and, at any time, it was feared that American, British or other foreign troops might be involved.
